

The City on Fire

Last Saturday Amanda, Mike and Alan went to the new modern art museum in the city centre. They were amazed by the works which were displayed there. It was the first time Amanda and Alan had been to a modern art gallery. Mike had seen many modern art galleries before. However, he hadn't seen such an interesting one before. They stayed there for about three hours. While they were visiting the galleries, a famous artist came for a talk on his latest works. Alan and Mike went to the third floor to see him. While they listened to him, Amanda attended a workshop in the basement. By the time Amanda's workshop ended, Mike and Alan had already got out of the talk with the artist. After they visited all the galleries in the museum, they went into their town to have a lunch together.

During their visit in the museum, they saw very interesting two photos of a street. In fact, the second picture was the edited version of the same street. In a minute they realized they were looking at the street where they actually live. It showed what would happen to it after an event like a fire or a war happened there. Until they saw those pictures, they had never thought of a disastrous event in a city. They were really scared to see their street on fire and left the photos in silence.
